

MYSTERY WILL BE HARD TO SOLVE

Body Of Man Found In Lake Waubesa Last July Was Identified By Brother.

CAME FROM EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Body Was Thrown From Train After He Was Clubbed To Death--Police Seeking For Clue To The Murderer.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Sept. 22.—Police of Evanston, Ill., and Madison, Wis., are working on the mystery of the murder of Ben Tichosen of Evanston, who met his death near Edwards Park, Lake Waubesa, probably on the night of July 28. His battered body was found by fishermen floating in Lake Waubesa on the morning of July 30, and his identity remained a mystery until yesterday, when a brother, Henry Tichosen, a liveyman of Burlington, Wis., positively identified the remains at the grave in the Potter's field here.

It transpires that the dead man left Evanston July 26, leaving his position as cookman for a rich man by the name of Himmus, for whom he had worked steadily for ten years. Tichosen said he was going to camp for a time near Madison and then would go on to Seattle, where he decided to settle down. He left Evanston with two companions for whom the authorities are now seeking. On Monday, July 29, according to records in the bank at Evanston, the remainder of Tichosen's bank deposit, $75, was withdrawn. The bank supposed this was done by Tichosen, but that is impossible, as on the morning of July 30 his battered body was found floating in Lake Waubesa. When he left Evanston he had drawn $325 from the bank and it is a theory that he was in a saloon near where he was killed. The body was found in an undershirt. In the shirt were worked in silk thread the initials "H. T." A gold ring of value was also on a finger. Gold-crowned molars indicated that the man had had costly dentistry performed in his mouth, although he had few teeth, having worn a plate of false teeth which were never found. The skull was fractured and ribs caved in, besides the nose, collarbone and other bones being broken. Because of the extent of injuries it was thought that he must have been hit by a train. The coroner thought the man had been bathing and was sitting on the bridge dressing when struck and hurled into the lake. The absence

WILL MEET EVERY POINT RAISED BY THE GOVERNMENT

Standard Oil Company Indicates It Will At- tempt To Meet Every Alleged Conten- tion In Bill Of Complaints.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, Sept. 22.—The line of defense of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, in allegations made by the federal government in its suit against the company, was indicated in the oil company's hearing today when Wesley H. Telford, treasurer of the Standard, was cross-examined on the witness stand by John G. Milburn, chief counsel for the defendants.

Questions put to the witness showed that the defendants intend to meet the government on every point raised in the long bill of complaints.

It is understood that Frank B. Kellogg, the government's counsel, has important evidence in his possession bearing on alleged relationship between railroad rebates and the profits of the corporation in the last eight years. It is also said this phase of Mr. Kellogg's case is being reserved until the line of questioning he pursued last week is finished.

To back his reported evidence as to rebates, Mr. Kellogg has had subpoenas served on several railroad men, among them being Jefferson Justice, assistant controller of the Pennsylvania line, and W. T. McCulloch, auditor of freight accounts of the New York Central. They have been ordered to produce certain papers dealing with the transportation of oil.

John C. Milburn, counsel for the Standard Oil company, has made a statement about the hearing in which he says "most of these transactions which Mr. Kellogg wants to know about happened so long ago that it is not strange if the witnesses are unable to give him the answers he seems to expect." Mr. Milburn said the company had nothing to conceal and that it was perfectly willing to place at Mr. Kellogg's disposal any of its records.

IDAHO'S GREAT SENATOR IS TO BE TRIED FOR GRAFT

Borah In On Alleged Lumber Land Steal Which Wisconsin Men Are Implicated In.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Hobbs, Idaho, Sept. 22.—A special session of the federal court convened here today to try United States Senator William E. Borah, who is charged with conspiring to defraud the federal government by securing illegal entry of timber lands. The indictment was returned last April and included beside Senator Borah Frank Martin, former senator of Idaho under Governor Steiensen's administration; Sumner G. Moon and J. T. Barber, millionaire stockholders of the Barber Lumber company, residing in Wisconsin; P. H. Davis, J. I. Wells, L. M. Pritchard, John Kincaid, William Sweet, Albert M. Palmer and H. S. Rind. Senator Borah asked for and has been accorded the privilege of a separate trial.

The investigation of the grand jury last spring into the timber land frauds produced a profound sensation. One hundred and fifty witnesses were called and the evidence showed that an organized raid had been made by the Barber Lumber company on the timber land of Lewiston district. It developed that in Idaho county about fifty thousand acres of land were patented by dummies and turned over to the lumber company.

The plan was very simple and one that had been often used to rob the government. The law permits a person to file a claim for land, but the person must take oath that he is buying the land with his own money and that the transaction is bona fide. He is limited to 160 acres, and upon the payment of $2.50 an acre a certificate for the quarter section is turned over to him. The lumber company is charged with having furnished hundreds of men with money to buy land with. It was necessary to have the protection of government officials, so political leaders of both the democratic and republican parties were put on the payroll of the lumber company.

It is charged that Senator Borah cooperated with Governor Steiensen in pushing the patents through for the dummies and, that as a result the lumber company obtained possession of timber worth more than $1,000,000. The indictments returned charge that the men accused induced the dummies to file claims on lands.

Government officials know of the land frauds two years ago and special agents conducted an investigation. Much evidence was gathered and preparations were made to bring the guilty parties to justice, but the arrival of the officials of the Western Reclamation of Minors for the murder of Governor Steiensen and the connection of the alleged murder cases caused a postponement for a year.

Senator Borah, whose trial is now to commence, is the republican leader of Idaho and his close personal and political friends are involved by the indictments. They declare that these are the result of a political conspiracy hatched by Rulick, a democrat, who has opposed Borah in all his political fights.

CONGRESSMEN BUSY IN THE SEARCH FOR INFORMATION

Many High-Hatted Frock-Coated Members Of Lower House Journeying Through The Country.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—These truly are the gladdest days of all the glad, glad year for congressmen. Dotted over the face of the habitable globe are little parties of frock-coated, high-hatted men whose faces are familiar in the halls of congress. For the most part they are traveling at government expense, engaged in seeking information to turn loose on their colleagues in Capitol Hill in the shape of speeches and to help fill up the pages of the Congressional Record.

This week saw the arrival from abroad of the immigration commission appointed by the President, the senate and the house. The members scarcely had landed and regained their "land legs" when a committee of dignified government officials came storming down the wharf, outward bound. The trio who composed this committee are hurrying over to England, France and Germany to acquaint themselves with tariff conditions in those countries. They were appointed by Secretary Cortelyou to look carefully into the matter. The heart of the treasury does not intend to be caught napping by tariff revisionists in the next session.

Perhaps the most important of these "jackets" as they are dubbed by the cynics, is that of the rivers and harbors committee of the house. The members are now touring the Great Lakes, examining the harbors and the principal canals and breakwaters. The start was made at Buffalo, but practically the entire lake system will be gone over. Great preparations are being made by those communities interested in the construction of a ship canal from the lakes to the Gulf of Mexico to entertain the committee, but it is probable that nothing will be gained by this, for the party cannot commit itself.

Among those who are making the trip are Congressman Acheson of Pennsylvania, Alexandria, of New York, Lawrence of Massachusetts, Davidson of Wisconsin, Bode of Minnesota, Ellis of Missouri, Sparkman of Florida, Randall of Louisiana, Burdick of Texas, Humphreys of Mississippi, and Moon of Tennessee. Nearly all are accompanied by their wives, and James H. Cassidy, secretary of the committee, with Mrs. Cassidy, is along.

The trip is not one of pleasure, by any means. The members of the party are putting in a good fourteen hours daily in looking over the improvements under way and examining into now schemes that will be presented in the coming session. Congressman Randall's enthusiasm is keeping his colleagues up to the work, although all are enthusiastic on the question of waterway development. Mr. Randall is president of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, which is pledged to a crusade for the purpose of having the government appropriate not less than $50,000,000 a year for waterway development.

Once the trip is ended, the committee will probably join the journey down the Mississippi river in the train of the president. This tour is planned for the first part of next month and besides President Roosevelt there will be in the party the members of the Inland Waterways commission, the Mississippi River commission, members of the rivers and harbors committee and members of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress. The official party will travel in the light-house tender, Lily, and the steamers Mississippi and Mackinac. A fleet of more than one hundred other craft will furnish escort. The President's journey is expected to stimulate greatly the interest in the whole question of waterway development.

RAISING FUNDS FOR FAMILY OF A HERO

Boys Who Were in Swimming and Drowning.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, Sept. 22.—A committee of prominent men on the east side has been organized to raise a fund for the benefit of the family of William Eaton, a clerk in the general postoffice, who, although an invalid, heroically saved two boys from drowning and lost his life from the exposure.

Eaton had been ill for a long time but he went to the foot of East Seventh street not far from his home, to get the fresh air and to watch the boys who bathe off the pier there. Presently he saw John Schneck and George Maloney being carried out into the river by the tide. Throwing off his coat, Eaton plunged into the water and succeeded in bringing both the lads back to the pier. As he lifted the second one to the ladder which leads to the pier floor he fell back into the water. The watchman at the pier went to his rescue in a rowboat, but Eaton was dead when the boat reached him. Eaton leaves a widow and seven small children. Among the committee is Supreme Court Justice Gleason.

TROLLEY NINES' SEASON ENDEDYESTERDAY WITH ROCKFORD IN FIRST PLACE AND BELOIT
SECOND.

SHIFTS IN STATE LEAGUE

May Give Janesville and Beloit a Joint Representation Next Season—1,200 Saw Game Yesterday.

With Beloit's decisive victory over Janesville by the score of 10 to 0, before a gallery of 1,200 spectators at Yank's Park yesterday, the regular season of the Wisconsin-Triple Trolley League came to a close. Rockford ranks first; Beloit is second; Janesville holds down third place; and Belvidere is the tail-end. Janesville was scheduled to play Rockford next Sunday but the management decided that inasmuch as this game could make no difference in the outcome and Rockford was anxious to try conclusions with a Chicago team, the nine representing the two Wisconsin cities should play games on Sept. 23 and Oct. 6, weather permitting. In the meantime both teams will make an effort to recruit a number of the Wisconsin State League players, so that two practically new organizations will be made up on the diamond and the game will be hard fought and well worth seeing.

Yesterday's game was not so bad after the disastrous first inning when Catcher Mackinnon allowed a number of balls to get by him and let in several runners. Perhaps the crack third baseman from the Toledo American league team, held down one of the bags for Beloit and the Line City aggregation had been braced at several other important points.

Possibilities of a new shuffle next season in the Wisconsin State League and its probable local hearing are being weighed and considered by the fans hereabouts. The Wisconsin league also closed its season yesterday with the present showing of 59 games won, 41 lost, percentage .588, and Janesville with 77 games won, 44 lost, and a percentage of .634, indicating that three games played early in the season should be forfeited to the "humblerjacks." Two of its protests are lodged against Freeport and one against Green Bay and the National association will be called upon to settle the mooted points. In a game with Freeport last Fourth of July the umpire put one of the Freeport players out of the game in the third inning. Freeport continued to play with eight men and won the game but Wausau now appeals to the rule which declares that no team may play without its full quota of players in uniform on the field.

Geographical handicaps of the present lineup will probably lead to a new arrangement next season whereby Freeport will take over the Lacrosse franchise and Beloit and Janesville, or some other southern Wisconsin city, the Wausau franchise. Beloit cannot support a team alone, as shown by past experience, but it may be found practicable to get Janesville and Beloit to co-operate in putting a single nine in the field. However, should Beloit gather the courage and the wherewithal to go it alone, Charles B. Conrad, president of the 1907 Trolley League, and Thomas Abbott, manager of the Janesville team, are resolved to build a baseball park in this city and put an independent team in the field.

Financially, the Trolley League was an unqualified success and the season closed with sufficient funds in the treasury to start the ball rolling in good shape next season, with possible shifts in the State League representation which may affect the local territory, constituting the only cloud on the horizon.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to express to our many friends and particularly to the Janesville Aeris of Eagles our sincere appreciation of their kindness and sympathy in the loss of our beloved son and brother, the late Frederick Thayer Mahan.

CONGRESS TALKS OF THE DRAINAGEMAY TAKE SUBJECT OF MARSHES IN COUNTRY.

WOULD RECLAIM LAND

Means Much If It Is Really Accomplished—Matter Is Worth Considering.

As the western desert is being made to bloom under Uncle Sam's tutelage, so the waste swamp places will be made to contribute their quota to the great total of American farm homes. The country has authorized the appropriation and expenditure of $10,000,000 for the construction of huge irrigation dams, canals and tunnels to subjugate the Great American Desert; why should it not look with equal favor upon the reclamation of the 75,000,000 acres or more of swamp lands, now equally as useless as the desert, but equally fertile and productive when reclaimed?

As a matter of fact the national drainage idea has already made great progress and is growing apace, so that it would cause no great surprise among those who have kept a watchful eye on the movement should congress pass such a law next session. There are a number of reasons why government drainage should appeal to the country even more strongly than government irrigation. In the first place every eastern state has a large area of swamp lands and instead of being located in the midst of forbidding deserts it is situated in comparatively populous sections of the country with transportation facilities already developed and in the second place would be a generation of these lands would be a shape and cheap engineering task. While government irrigation reclamation is costing the official estimates of $20 an acre, the official estimates of $20 an acre, instead of being called upon to vote for improvements of far distant lands, thousands of miles away from their constituencies, every congressman in voting for drainage would directly benefit his own state. Having already helped the west by favorable irrigation legislation, why should he not assist the home-seekers in his own district to secure a fertile farm?

Great Value of Redeemed Swamps.

The value of such lands when reclaimed—considerable has already been accomplished by private enterprise—runs from $50 to $200 an acre. With all our swamp lands thus improved, and making $200 as a basis, we would be unveiling an inland empire worth between three and four billion dollars and adding to the country's productive farm area a territory equal to the great states of Illinois and Kansas, or to all of the New England states with Pennsylvania and Maryland added, or to the combined states of Virginia, Tennessee and Louisiana.

The query as to whether such reclamation is practicable is answered by the engineers of the irrigation service. They have already completed great topographic surveys, started years ago, would enable them to at once begin active drainage reclamation.

But again, even with every eastern estate selfishly interested, will congress feel like appropriating great sums of money for the purpose? The huge surplus in the treasury today could not perhaps be put to better use as it would not only create homes and national wealth out of nothing but give employment to a great army of men. Direct appropriations, however, would not be necessary any more than they were in the passage of the national irrigation act.

Congress Deceived to be Favorable.

Last winter, a bill, introduced by Senator Flint, California, was favorably reported by the Senate Public Lands Committee, appropriating the money derived from the sales of government lands in the eastern states, and while the bill was not passed for a vote, Senator Flint took a jolt of defeat and found a generally favorable sentiment.

In speaking to him of its chances, Representative Stearns of Minnesota, the originator of the bill in the House, said: "Flint, if you will get the bill passed in the senate, we can put it through the house."

It is understood that a determined effort is to be made next winter to secure its enactment into a law, and always an aggressive champion of such internal improvements, it goes without saying that President Roosevelt will lend it his support.

Provides a Revolving Fund.

The bill provides that the fund, just as in the case of the irrigation fund, shall become a revolving one, viz., the cost of the reclamation to be borne by the lands benefited and paid back to the government, and to be used over again on new projects, ad infinitum.

It appropriates the receipts from land sales for two years, amounting to about 1,000,000 and also adds a direct appropriation of $2,000,000, but even should the latter be struck out, there would still be an additional annual automatic appropriation of about $500,000, to be used over and over. With the low cost of drainage reclamation, this would enable the reclamation service to make a very creditable start.

Some of the Big Swamp Areas.

Among the great swamp areas of the country are the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys, California, the Kanawha swamps of Indiana, several large projects in Minnesota and Illinois, the St. Francis basin and entire Lower Mississippi River region, the Great Dismal Swamp of Virginia, the Everglades of Florida, and various others, large and small. Of these the Everglades is the largest, though the drainage of the lower Mississippi lands, taken as a whole in connection with river improvement, is a vast work of some 20,000,000 acres.

already reclaimed is valued at $200 per acre.

Students of the subject claim, that taken all in all, drainage reclamation is second to no internal improvement in the United States and that carried to completion it means that tens of millions of acres of the most fertile land possible which has lain idle for centuries, may be converted from dismal and pestiferous swamps into highly prosperous homes, to become the garden spots of the nation.

OLD WALL USED AS A SAFE.

Vermonters Find a Purse and Coin Hidden Nearly a Century Ago.

While Louis Granello of Bridgewater, Vt., was tearing down an old wall of the Bridgewater town farm he unearthed a purse hidden in a small vault built for the purpose between the stones. The leather was rotten with age and fell apart as soon as handled, but the several coins which it contained were as bright and fresh as on the day they left the mint. As the newest coin in the lot was struck off 70 years ago and the structure was built about 1832, it is believed that the purse has lain in its vault three-quarters of a century. The money found in the old vault included 12 silver half dollars, ranging in date from 1812 to 1832, and another coin, probably an English fourpence, dated 1775. There were also three dimes coined in the '20s, Mr. Granello would not part with his souvenirs at any price.

Giants of Other Days.

According to an account in an old folk book, 1552, the ancient giants reached the enormous height of 33 feet. It says: "Fazellus relates, and from him Cluverius, that 1547 A. D., near Panormum, in Sicily, the body of a giant was dug up about 18 cubits, or 27 feet tall. The same author states that A. D. 1516, near Mazzerone, in Sicily, there was found the body of a giant 20 cubits, or 30 feet, tall. Further, that A. D. 1548, near Syracuse, was dug up another body of the same dimensions. A. D. 1550, near Battella, in Sicily, was dug up a body 33 feet high, and whose skull was about 10 feet in circumference. There is described the corpse of a giant of great size, found standing in a vast cave near Depanum, in Sicily. A. D. 1342, whose staff was like the mast of a ship, and the forepart of whose skull would contain a Sicilian bushel, which is about a third of an American bushel.

What He Wanted.

An Italian recently entered the store of a Portland street hardware and paint dealer, says the Boston Record, and in his broken English asked the clerk: "John—a, you got—a de machine make—a hot—a cold?" The clerk tried hard to understand what the customer wanted, but was unable until he started taking him around the store and pointed out individually every conceivable apparatus pertaining to heating in the store. Finally the Italian spied a small spring balance suspended on an upper shelf with the indicator displayed, "John—a, see dis—a one," he said, "Just do sum—a kind, wild numbers; make—a hot—a cold. You got one?" He wanted a thermometer.

Benediction.

They were cloping, and the stern parent was supposed to be in pursuit, but he wasn't. On the contrary, a telegram awaited them at the next town. "Is it forgiveness?" asked the agitated youth, as he handed it to the unseeling one. She read it through and burst into tears. Then the startled youth took it and read it aloud. "Your mother and I offer congratulations. Your hasty action meets with our approval. We can now carry out a plan that we have long contemplated, and that was delayed only because we had you with us. In other words, we are about to break up housekeeping and go into a flat!"

JANESVILLE BOYS ENJOYED THE CLASS RUSH SATURDAY

Beloit College Sophomores Won in a Spirited Twenty-Minutes' Work.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Beloit, Wis., Sept. 23.—The absence of football men from the game rush, which was won from the freshmen by the sophomores, Saturday, has been explained by an order from Coach Fairweather forbidding athletic candidates to enter the scrap. This action on Fairweather's part was the result of an injury sustained in the rush last year by John H. Hanson, one of the two phenomenal colored athletes of Beloit college. He suffered a dislocation of one shoulder and was not of much use throughout the season. The coach believes that the state championship would have been won by Beloit had Hanson been in the Thanksgiving day game against Lawrence university. By Fairweather's order the freshmen were minus ten husky men and the sophs five.

Propose Monument

Dr. Eaton, president of Beloit college, has proposed to erect a monument to the late Henry D. Smith, by saying at vespers Sunday that he hoped the college would make the dedication of such a memorial one of the achievements of the present school year. Mr. Smith was field secretary of the college and was drowned at Lake Geneva last summer in attempting to save the lives of others. The monument was suggested by Philip H. Kennedy, instructor in oratory, is Junior President.

NO ACCIDENTS IN NATURE.

Every Calamity, No Matter How Great, Has a Definite Beginning. There are no accidents in nature. The avalanche that without a moment's warning rushes headlong down the mountain side is not an accident.

For years previous they atoms have been crystallizing, and adding their minute weight to the mass which left its base when the accumulation reached a certain point.

Neither is baldness an accident. The infinitesimally small germ which is the cause of Dandruff and Baldness, finds silently and long before the result is seen.

The small germs which thrive on the scalp and which are the cause of Dandruff and Baldness cannot exist, however, when Newbro's Herpicide is applied.

..Forty Years Ago..

Janesville Daily Gazette, Monday,
Sept. 23, 1867.—Dramatic.—The dramatic entertainment at Lapham's hall tomorrow evening promises to be first rate and we hope it may be well patronized. We have seen the program and must say that the cast of characters is a good one, especially the parts to be personated by two M.
D.s of this city. The proceeds are to be appropriated to the Parish of Christ church and the house ought to be filled. Children are admitted at half price.

A Good Railroad Appointment.—
We learn that W. B. Strong, for some years superintendent of the McGregor Western railroad in which office he made a most energetic, efficient and courteous officer, and who is thoroughly posted in railroad work, has been appointed to the superintendency of the Iowa terminals of the North-Western railroad with headquarters at Council Bluffs. Mr. Strong has a host of friends in this city who will be glad to hear of his prosperity.

Horticultural Exhibition.—The show of fruits and flowers at the Horticultural exhibition this afternoon is very fine and altogether superior to what the most sanguine had reason to expect. It will repay one for a visit to the hall to look upon the fine specimens of apples, pears and grapes that adorn the tables not to mention a better display of cut flowers than us usually seen at such exhibitions. We hope it may be well patronized this evening, not only for the purpose of satisfying the taste of the visitors, but to aid the society and encourage the cultivation of fruits and flowers.
After the exhibition is over the young people propose to have a social dance and all can be prepared to have a good time.

Before The Footlights

Electricity will play a most important part and form a particular factor in this season's presentation of the famous Lenders and Pix-ley musical comedy, "The Burgomaster" which is booked at the Myers theatre, for Saturday, Sept. 28, morning and evening. Manager Wm. P.
Cullen has even gone to Europe in order to secure the very latest Paris-fashioned electrical and prismatic effects.

equally successful in London, Paris and Berlin.
"Before and After" has a plot so interesting that it requires the closest attention to keep up with it and give it all the laughs it demands.
Its action centers around the "Sunny Side" postcard—a beautiful trade for goodness and general all temper-and are made the cause of all the incredibly ridiculous entanglements.

SCENE FROM "BEFORE AND AFTER"
Before taking them one may be surprised at once a kind and extremely ill-tempered. After taking one loves every man and woman in sight. All being said, so true to nature and exactly exact has the scheme been worked out that the water and spray appears to actually leap over the heads of the bathers. Another innovation will be the introduction of a real rain storm.

ter, with the choristers from the Asolo theatre, New York, are authority for the statement that, unlike so many fumes of recent years, "Before and After" furnishes no questionable material as a foundation for laughter.
It is said to be full of good, clean, honest fun and of that wholesome sort that even a child may go without being hurt. It is a play that certainly kept critical New York in tears of laughter for more than three hundred nights, and which has been and set shows the gorgeous parlor of one of the big hotels in Syracuse, with its rich hangings, its marble staircase and its vaulted ceilings.
Mr. Dietrichstein himself will head the company of players on this occasion. Among the other members of the company are: the great character actress, Kenyon Bishop, beautiful Nellie But-

Edmund Elton, G. M. Helden, John
Arthur and others.

NEW USE FOR ALARM CLOCK.

Timepiece May Be Utilized as Automatic Door Opener.

An ordinary alarm clock may, in the manner here indicated, be made, at any time wished for, to perform various useful services, such, for instance, as unbolting a door.

Detach the hammer of the alarm.
If you do not wish to ring the bell, fix the clock firmly in a box fastened to the wall, and set the alarm overnight for, let us say, seven o'clock. Attach a line to the stem of the winding handle of the alarm. Keeping the line taut, attach its other end to the knob of the bolt to be unfastened.

At seven o'clock next morning the alarm will "go off," of course without sounding the gong. While it is so doing, the handle will revolve, and, by winding the line as it does so, will thus unbolt the door.

Other adaptations of the same idea will occur to many persons.

WHO PAYS FOR STRIKES

The nation prevails to large extent, in labor circles, that when a strike is won, labor has gained a victory, and capital suffered defeat. This is a mistaken notion, for the success of any strike means additional cost to production and higher prices to the consuming public.

The average consumer, and the man least able to pay advanced prices, is the wage-earner, so that the cost of the strike, in the last analysis, falls the heaviest on this class of people. The New York Sun, in discussing the strike from an economic standpoint, says very tersely:

"The theory that a very large percentage of the wealth of the country is in the hands of a few men and that strikes are the most effective means of taking some of it away from them and transferring it to other and more worthy hands is not supported either by the facts of the case or by experience."

"To some extent labor, and organized labor in particular, regards itself as the victim of the greed and oppression of an element called capital. It proceeds on the theory that there is a more or less fixed quality of wealth or money in the country and that the only way in which labor can obtain what it regards as its proper share of that money is by an imitation of the methods of the highwayman. This theory is essentially stupid. In all except a few unusual cases the strike is not a battle of labor against capital, but of labor against labor."

"It is an assault made by a group of producers upon the great body of consumers, most of whom are wage-earners, even as the strikers are. Whatever a group of strikers may gain from a strike comes from the pockets of others who, like themselves, are dependent upon their daily labor for the maintenance of themselves and their families."

"Occasionally a strike ruins or cripples an individual employer, but labor is no gainer by that process. Labor points to the record and claims that its improved condition, in the matters of wages and hours of work, is due to its demand, usually enforced by strikes, for a larger share of the proceeds of its industry."

"It justifies its policy by the existence of higher wages and shorter hours than those prevailing before the strike was used as a weapon. The fact is that labor's improvement has come in spite of its frequent disturbance of industrial conditions and not because of those disturbances."

"The laborer's condition today is better than it used to be because of greater production and improvement in productive processes and methods, and, in important measure, in the elevation of social standards."

"Reference to the census reports on the growth of manufactures in the United States shows that in 1820 the item of wages represented 23.2 per cent of the total value of products."

"All the facts and the figures show that strikes are a weapon which labor uses against itself. Strikes are a stupid economic blunder, and the winning profit of those which are successful comes out of the pockets of other workers who in their turn retaliate and draw upon the pockets of their fellows."

"There may be some glory and some satisfaction in conducting a strike, but the loss resulting is inevitable, even If success attends the effort and this loss is shared by people who can ill afford it. There is a better way to adjust differences, and that is by dealing directly with the individual workmen, a policy which is pursued in all open shops.

The best board of arbitration is composed of two men, the single employer and his employer. If the former possesses ability that warrants recognition, and has made himself invaluable, by close and intelligent application, he has no better friend than the man who employs him, or no man who will listen to his grievances, with more solicitude.

The open shop establishes a bond of sympathy between employer and employee, which is not possible to the closed shop, where individuality is lost in organization, and loyalty to the union. It gives to the individual workman manhood and independence, two important qualities not possible to develop in organized labor circles.

THE MONETARY SITUATION

In speaking of the monetary situation, Henry Clows, the New York banker, says:

"The annual statement of the controller of the currency on the condition of all national banks of the country under the call of September 4 is an exceptionally important one. Comparisons are available with the figures of May 20 this year and September 4 last year. In the case of the former the loans and discounts show the large expansion of 47 million dollars, while the corresponding figures for last year show the rather startling expansion of more than 379 millions."

"As a partial offset, there has been an increase of 68 millions in specie and 9 millions in legal tenders, while deposits have increased 119 millions. An appreciable part of this expansion undoubtedly represents the transfer of loans to this country from abroad; but it nevertheless also reflects a strain upon the financial situation which foreign money centers are not in a position to relieve in the form of abstract loans. On the other hand, we may unquestionably rely upon the beneficial effects of large exports of our agricultural products, of which we have a sufficiently adequate supply to export at the favorable prices conditions abroad will compel buyers there to pay."

"It is quite evident that there is ample room to adjust prices to a favorable export basis if it should prove the present ratio is too high; cotton, for instance, is about 2 1/2 per pound higher than a year ago, wheat is 25c per bushel in round figures, corn 15c and oats 25c."

Regarding corporations and the president's policy, he says:

"The government's investigation which has been in progress in this city this week into the Standard Oil company, although showing sensational financing and profits, did not become an influential feature in the market situation in that it merely placed in definite form information that had previously been the subject of general and confident belief."

"Its main connection with the market is contained in its practical demonstration that the administration has not given up its campaign against wrongdoers, be they individuals or large corporations. The president is in the fight to stay and the successful completion of his plans means added protection and value for the holders of securities."

"He has been misrepresented, but thinking people are every day beginning to see the wisdom of his policy and the beneficial results to ensue. It is not the president's policy that is the source of weakness in the Wall street situation."

"The real trouble is the fact that Wall street and the country at large have gone ahead too fast and are now suffering the inevitable punishment for corporate officials responsible for evil deeds is one that will prove offensive and has the additional merit of avoiding punishment of innocent stockholders for what they are in nowise responsible."

Once upon a time Janesville was the center of the fast horse country of Wisconsin. There are still many fine animals owned here, but the days of the speedy ones are past and only remembered by the old-timers who recollect the days of the big race meets when every hotel was full and people sleeping on cots in the halls.

The railroads are making a fine fight to keep running even if their train schedules are slower than they used to be. The money saved by the traveling public in railway travel is to be eaten up in the increased hotel bills after January 1. Why not have some law passed to stop that?

It is said that this year will see the last of the great cattle herds retreating from business. Sheep are to take their places and instead of the good old roast of Merry England it will be the mutton that graces the Christmas tables.

Janesville denies it is to relinquish its fair. Good for Evansville. It is to be hoped it is not. As it now stands it is the only fair in Rock county and it would be too bad to have good old Rock without any fair at all.

Mayor Becker of Milwaukee still continues to deliver his speeches on good roads and the farmers still continue to pile the dirt in the middle and then drive off to one side themselves.

Congressman Burton of Ohio has resigned to become the republican candidate for mayor of Cleveland. The national administration is said to be backing him, and if elected, he will be slated for something better than a mayorship.

One thousand miles in 21 hours is the record of the winner in the Milwaukee midnight automobile race. That is a test of endurance which ought to satisfy and yet automobilists in its infancy.

The farmers who were fortunate enough to have their tobacco shedded before Saturday night will appreciate how the fellows feel whose crop was touched up by Jack Frost.

Two prisoners escaped from a Chicago jail and the papers make a great deal of hubbub about it. Especially, as several men say they make their get-away and encouraged them to run.

The merry child of the coal as it passes down the chute into the collar is not any more pleasing than is the drip of the ice as it slowly melts away in the summer.

Janesville is settling down to a quiet existence as a city which is going to forge ahead rapidly without any bluster and blow.

Market prices are up now. The prediction of a frost in the corn belt did not materialize and hence there was no decided bulge.

The Milwaukee Free Press can not help hitting back at the Sentinel once in awhile no matter how hard it tries to be good.

This is a queer season anyway, says an exchange. Why queer? The laws of nature are merely being lived up to.

This question of selecting a superintendent of the county roads is meant all right, but will it work?

With dollar wheat not a dream but a fact the farmer with a few thousand bushels is well off.

So Janesville may be put on the baseball map after all.

The first day of fall was certainly true to its name.

PRESS COMMENT.

Best to be Sure Before Answering.

Madison Democrat: The Janesville Gazette asks: "Who pays the freight?" Haven't looked it up lately but Jones used to.

From Zion City—The Latest Horror.

Milwaukee Journal: Like "democratic Americanism" and "anarchy," "Fidelity" seems to be a polite term for a very bad thing.

John D.'s Income Per Minute.

Chicago News: Reduced to an average of $10 a minute the common or garden variety of intellect is able to grasp what Mr. Rockefeller's income means.

It's Idealized, Anyway.

Exchange: The face of a pretty Irish girl on the new gold coins is causing a protest in some quarters, but it is still true that a gold coin makes the whole world kin.

Making Up For Past Oversights.

Milwaukee Sentinel: Well, Mrs. Porter Palmer came over on the last train, even if her ancestors and the late Porter's didn't come over on the Mayflower. So there now.

This Generation Will Hardly Heed.

El Paso Herald: The pope is starting out again to prescribe what good Catholics should read or write. This is one of the best ways ever devised to promote schism.

Billy Sunday Severely Scored.

Exchange: The Western Christian Advocate scores Evangelist Billy Sunday's pulpit language as disgusting and sinful and takes upon itself the duty of telling him so. It is not only unconventional, but monstrously irreverent and absolutely blasphemous.

They're the Anointed: Why Mourn?

Milwaukee News: Seeing that they came to Milwaukee to see that more than the friends of the people shall be placed on guard. In the next fight against the corporations, it would have been rank ingratitude to ask the half-breed politicians to pay their way in to the state fair.

Status of Telegraphers' Strike.

Fond du Lac Commonwealth: The telegraphers' strike, which is now entering upon its seventh week, seems to be slipping along without attracting much attention, except from those who are suffering more or less inconvenience by reason of it. The telegraph companies have enough operators to warrant them in accepting business "subject to delay" and the most certain thing in connection with it is the delay.

In the meantime, the strikers are still out of work, have lost six weeks' pay and the relief fund, which was promised, has failed to materialize. Now and then a rumor blows up to the effect that a settlement is about to be made, but the longer the strike lasts the more remote becomes the possibility of such an outcome. The telegraph companies seem pretty well satisfied. The fight is costing them a lot of money but they are willing to pay the price.

Who Ordered the Cocktails?

Chicago Inter Ocean: The president of the United States visited Indianapolis last Memorial day. As was natural and courteous he and his associates, some forty persons altogether, were entertained at luncheon at the home of Vice President Fairbanks, which is no "palace," but simply the home of a prosperous American gentleman.

Hence a caterer was called in to provide for guests more numerous than would ordinarily be entertained. And the caterer, considering the probable tastes of the majority of the guests, prefaced the repast with certain liquid concoctions commonly called "cocktails."

Horror! The Hon. Charles Warren Fairbanks, pillar of the Methodist church and habitual delegate to the General Conference, offering his guests alcoholic refreshment.

All these persons who deem themselves specially commissioned to ensure the morals and correct the manners of other people—felt it a duty to be gloriously shocked and to protest.

Then an indignant friend of the Vice President stated or was reported as stating that the President, having expressed a desire for a cocktail, was really responsible for the appearance of "rum" on the vice presidential table, and that the Vice President should not be blamed for a hospitable complaisance.

First result: A tremendous rolling of the eyes and a censorious clamor of tongues about the President, in which some eminent churchmen joined.

Second result: A formal denial from the White House that the President had anything to do with ordering the cocktails.

Third result: Disparaging remarks from a Bishop of the Methodist church. And so the noise goes on.

Dietz Wins.

Oshkosh Northwestern: The news that John Dietz has won in his contention with respect to his claimed rights regarding Cameron dam on the Thornapple river in the northern part of this state, will doubtless be received with a good deal of satisfaction by many persons who have cherished a friendly feeling toward the lone settler who has so long "stood off" the hired agents and emissaries of the big lumber barons. The so-called Dietz dispute has been a matter of general public interest for the past two or three years, and while opinions have been divided regarding the justice of Dietz's claims, there is little question that public sentiment was largely on his side. This was especially so with respect to the neighbors of Dietz and the people living in the surrounding sections, and it helps to explain why the local authorities always failed in attempts to serve legal papers on Dietz, in an effort to get the latter to court to have the latter pass on the points of the dispute. With Dietz it was a case where "possession was nine points in the law," and he doggedly persisted in his determination to stick to his point of vantage, depending on his trusty rifle to keep trespassers from encroaching on his land, and thus preventing the lumber company from repairing the dam and silencing its logs through, without first making terms with himself.

The Stranger Within the Gates.

New York Tribune: A Miss Laura Smith has been going the rounds of the churches in New York, Brooklyn and Hudson carefully arrayed in her oldest clothes to test the welcome given to a stranger in the average church, to see what was meant by the invitation "Strangers cordially welcome," and, second, to see how many of the clergymen or the members of the congregation would, after the service, speak a word of encouragement or greeting to the stranger within their gates.

She writes to "The Ladies' Home Journal" that the welcome was very chilly in this city. She visited thirty-seven churches. Two pastors spoke to her voluntarily and one was brought to her by a church member. In five churches she was spoken to by thirteen members. To thirty-two churches she came and was welcomed by no one. In thirteen churches she was welcomed by one or more members. In four churches four members greeted her. In thirteen churches she paid her attention to whatever.

What does it all prove except that New York churches are not like country churches and New York people are not like country people? In the country, and a large number of us have our chief memories of churchgoing in the country, and consequently formed our standards of church hospitality there—in the country "the stranger within the gates" has his hand shaken and his circumstances, affairs and needs are inquired into. In New York with any greater hospitality than a sent in which to listen to the "famous preacher," if he be merely curious, or a place to worship unobtrusively, if he be more serious in his inclinations? Would not the average New York "stranger" be embarrassed by having rural religious hospitality thrust upon him by a Fifth avenue congregation?

BENEFIT FOR GEORGE SILER IN CHICAGO

Boxing and Fistic Fraternity Give Benefit for Great Fight Referee and Authority.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Tonight is to be a gala night in fistic circles. Top-notch fighters in every class of the present day and champions of a decade ago are to don the mitts in the Coliseum in friendly bouts in aid of the benefit to George Siler, one of the greatest authorities in the world of pugilism and whose efforts have done much to raise boxing to its present high standard among sports.

Mr. Siler is sixty-two years old and has announced his permanent retirement from all connection with the fighting game. He leaves behind him a record that has few equals. It was away back in the latter part of the '60s that he first entered the ranks of professional pugilism, boxing at 142 pounds. In 1872 he started in exhibition bouts in New York, touring the country with Billy Madden later. In 1872 he won the lightweight championship after meeting all comers. He quit the ring as a boxer in 1881 and turned his attention to refereeing. He has probably officiated in more important ring battles than any other living man. His principal appearances were as referee in the Corbett-Pittsborough bout and the battles between Jeffries and Pittsborough, Jeffries and Sharkey, Pittsborough and Maher, and Battling Nelson and Joe Gans.

What is being said in the corner space day by day is not only true but is of vital interest to every reader.

You probably remember the statement that Dr. Richards to do your dentistry. Not long since mention was made of a party who came here from Shullsburg, Wis., to have Dr. Richards do the work, and after paying $10.00 to the dentist, he found that the dentist wanted to charge $25.00.

Now comes a party from another neighboring town for a lot of gold bridge-work, and after Dr. Richards had fitted and squared set his price. It was revealed that he was $25.00 under what the dentist wanted to charge for the job.

Of course he got the work to do. He guarantees his work to be of the very highest quality.

This being true, why pay twice what is necessary when by choosing him for your dentist.

Marshall, his trial was not for next Monday afternoon at two o'clock.

The examination of Ernest Blum, charged with violating a city-licensed watch, which was to have taken place this morning, was adjourned to Friday, Sept. 27, at 10:30 a. m., on account of the inability of the officers to locate the principal witness in time for proceedings today. TWENTY-FIVE NURSES GO ON A STRIKE IN ST. PAUL Refusal of Superintendent of City Hospital to Reappoint One of Their Number Causes Trouble.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 22.—Twenty-five nurses of the training school located at the City Hospital this morning went on a strike when Superintendent Dr. Auler refused to reappoint a former nurse dismissed for insubordination several days ago.

The battery of four evaporators at the sugar factory, one of which was blown up and east Rudolph Berger's life on Friday morning last, is shown in the above picture. The Gazette representative was not permitted to take a time-exposure photograph of the wreck of No. 2—counting from the left—and the snapshot which was taken before the company's lawyer and second-in-command manager reached the scene, failed to show much more than a blur. The evaporator was blown up by the ignition of hydrogen gas which had accumulated within the lower and wooden portion of the big tank. Rudolph Berger and August Buggs were at work adjusting a valve indicator on the right-hand side when the accident occurred.

FROST SATURDAY EVE INJURES TOBACCO

Cold Snap Catches One-fourth of This Year's Crop Still in the Field.

Late crop tobacco still standing in the field was damaged and some of it probably destroyed by the frost that visited this section of the country last Saturday night. Only the very late tobacco standing on low ground was so badly damaged by the frost that it will be lost but it is feared that most of the crop still in the field was affected by the cold snap. According to tobacco men about one-fourth of this year's crop is still to be harvested but by this close of this week practically all of it will be in the shed. The frost was not severe enough to injure the corn.

WOULDN'T RECOGNIZE HIS PARENTS NOW

Janesville Man Has Not Seen Father or Mother For 22 Years—Last Heard From 14 Years Ago.

Somewhere in this wide, wide world there roams a Janesville man's father and mother whom he has not seen since he was two years old and has not heard from them for the past fourteen years. Over a score of years ago the father and mother started from Ireland, their native country, for America and belated them they left their only son in the custody of his grandmother. He was two years old and today he, James McCartney, residing at 306 South Academy street, this city, would not know either his father or mother if he were to see them standing before him. He has in his possession no photograph of his parents and no family picture showing the walls of his home. He was born in Ardara county, Ireland, near the port town of Ashgill. His parents emigrated for America 22 years ago, leaving him with his grandmother who cared for him while in childhood and whom he made his home with until he came to this side of the Atlantic two years ago. It was over 14 years ago when the parents of the young man were heard from and at that time they were making their home in Washington, D. C. McCartney has two brothers and two sisters who were born in this country and whom he has never seen. Where the family he McCartney does not know but he is anxious to learn.

PEACE CONFERENCE BARREN OF RESULT

HAQUE IS A FIASCO.

CHOATE ALONE HOPEFUL

He Believes Permanent Arbitration
Court Will Be Established—America Blamed for Lack of Preparation.

The Hague, Sept. 22.—After having been in session over three months, and with adjournment probably a month in the distance, it is recognized generally, and even by the most optimistic in the peace movement, that the second international peace conference has been and will be at its conclusion barren of results leading to permanent measures of benefit to the peace of the world.

Mr. Choate, of the American delegation, however, is still optimistic regarding the results, even on the great questions, and especially that of a permanent court of arbitration, being satisfied that the principle is admitted. He thinks that once the conference has concluded its session, it will be an easy matter to overcome the prejudice concerning the allotment of judges, and that thereafter the establishment of the court will be an easy task.

Few Agree with Choate.

The general opinion among the other delegates, however, differs from that of Mr. Choate. They believe that the adoption of Mr. Edward Fry's proposal intrusting the governments with the task of finding a system by which to elect the judges a naked method for burying the whole affair, as they declare upon the conference is ended the governments will not study the questions at issue, such as the limitation of armaments.

Even the proposition for a future meeting of the conference, which was unanimously adopted on Saturday, has been altered so as to suppress its most important part, namely, the periodicity of the meetings, merely providing for the calling of a third conference but establishing nothing with regard to convening future conferences after that.

America Not Prepared.

The prevailing opinion, as expressed by one of the leading delegates, is that the absence of results in the conference on the great questions was due to the lack of preparation by all the countries represented. This, he said, was especially striking in the case of the American delegation, which was supposed to have come here in complete accord with the Latin-American countries. This accord neither existed nor has it been reached during the conference. Indeed, what is to be dreaded, he declared, is that the chief result of the conference will be a growing feeling of difference on the part of the South Americans toward Washington, as, rightly or wrongly, they accuse the United States of having neglected them and of caring only for working in accord with Great Britain and Germany, thinking that union with these great powers would be sufficient to carry out any project.

It is only to foresee that the only success will be attained by Germany, which prevented the adoption of projects to which she is opposed, and by the small states, which have proved that it is impossible to reach a world agreement without their support.

It is estimated that the conference has cost altogether $1,250,000.

SAVED FROM AN ANGRY MOB.

Negro Murderer Taken from Delaware, O., to the Columbus Jail.

Columbus, O., Sept. 23.—Henry Dalton, a negro who last night shot and fatally wounded Chris Horn, a big four engineer, at Delaware, O., was brought to Columbus Sunday evening by Sheriff Matthews to save the prisoner from violence at the hands of Delaware's enraged citizens. Dalton was in subject terror and plainly showed his relief when brought into the city prison.

The shooting of Horn was wanton and unprovoked. James Knowlton, a quarry man at Sandbury, and Dalton, who was employed at the quarry, were riding in a buggy when it crashed into a carriage driven by Horn. The engineer upbraided the men for their carelessness when Knowlton went back and started to fight with Horn. Knowlton was getting the worst of it when Dalton drew a revolver and shot Horn.

PRESIDENT GOES TO CAPITAL SOON

HIS QUIET BUT BUSY SUMMER VACATION NEARS ITS END.

MESSAGE ALMOST READY

Details of Mr. Roosevelt's Coming Trip to the Mississippi and His Camping Out in Louisiana.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Sept. 23.—President Roosevelt's summer vacation at his Sagamore Hill home will end at ten a. m. Wednesday when he, with Mrs. Roosevelt, members of the family and the executive staff, will take a special train for Washington.

During the three and a half months the president has occupied the home-stand, he has had the quietest and at the same time the busiest vacation he has indulged in since he became an occupant of the White House. The records show that since June 12 the president has received 125 persons at Sagamore Hill. Some of the callers have been distinguished foreigners and a few have made purely social calls, but the majority of them have been officials on strictly governmental business.

Wrote Message and Speeches.

While visitors have been comparatively few, the work which the president has accomplished in other directions has been great. His annual message to congress is practically completed. The document needs only finishing touches, and but few of these. In addition to writing his annual comprehensive speeches. One of these was delivered at Provincetown, Mass., recently, and the others will be made during the western-southern trip which is to be begun immediately on his return to Washington.

Will Be Spectacular Trip.

Washington, Sept. 23.—While the preparations for President Roosevelt's western trip have not been completed, the program has been sufficiently arranged to make it certain that the tour will be one of the most spectacular ever undertaken by him. He will leave here a week from Sunday and will be absent from the seat of government until the twenty-third or twenty-fourth of October.

The trip has three distinctive objects: The dedication of the McKinley monument at Canton, O.; the inspection of the Mississippi river with a view to arousing interest in a ship channel from its mouth to Keokuk, Ia., and the Great Lakes, and the securing of a period of recreation for the chief executive before the beginning of the duties of the winter. Incidentally there will be some speeches on the return journey which will deal with current issues.

To Canton and Keokuk.

The stay at Canton on Monday, September 24, will be only a little more than sufficient duration to permit the president to pay his tribute to the memory of his immediate predecessor, but he will there meet Vice President Fairbanks and a number of other people of note and will make a long speech. He will then proceed direct to Keokuk, where Tuesday, October 1, he will be given a notable public reception, deliver an address and begin his journey by boat down the Father-of-Waters, said to be with the exception of a short voyage by President Pierce, the first trip on the river ever made by a president.

Reports from all points at which stops are to be made indicate that the party will be entertained on a lavish scale throughout. At Keokuk there will be a water pagoda, and many citizens will convey the president down the river in crafts of all sizes, for 20 or 30 miles, and a number of them will accompany him all the way to Memphis. At Memphis the president will find the deep waterway convention in session, and he will deliver a speech.

Then the president will turn his back on civilization for a period of rest and sport in the wilds of northern Louisiana.

The party will be in camp from the fifth to the twenty-first of October. Returning, the president will speak at Vicksburg and at Herculano, near Nashville. At the latter place he will pay his respects to the memory of President Jackson.

Body of Girl Found in Trunk.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 23.—The body of an unknown girl about 18 years old, was found in a trunk Sunday on the bench about two miles south of Elliot Bay. COMPRESS TRUST ILLEGAL

MISSISSIPPI COURT OUSTS THE CONCERN FROM STATE.

Given One Year to Wind Up Its Business and Withdraw—Receiver Not Appointed.

Vicksburg, Miss., Sept. 23.—The Gulf Compress company was Saturday afternoon declared an illegal trust by Chancellor R. S. Hicks, of the Mississippi district court. He gave the company one year to wind up its business in this state and withdraw. He denied the state's application for a receiver.

The district attorney asked the court to impose a fine of $1,800,000 and a report agreed that this had been done. There was consternation among the officials of the compress company and other corporations until it was learned that the report was unfounded.

The Gulf Compress company was organized two years ago and now owns and controls 31 compresses, 10 of which are located in Mississippi. These plants in a measure control the cotton business of the state, at least the export business, and it has raised the price of compressing, increased the rates for storing cotton, and lowered the value of seed, according to the allegations, until the gulf company is doing business in restraint of trade.

No action was taken against the company until two weeks ago, when it bought out an independent press here, whereupon District Attorney Thomas filed two bills against it, one an order to dissolve and the other asking for a receiver. The chancellor's decision will allow the company to move this season's crop. An appeal was taken to the supreme court.

EXPLORER BRUCE RESCUED.

Found by Searchers in a Much Exhausted Condition.

Tromsø, Norway, Sept. 23.—Wm. Bruce, the explorer, for whom safety much anxiety has been entertained, arrived here Sunday aboard the ship Hucks. Bruce and his companion, Hjalmar Johansen, had established a station on the west coast, their camp being located on Prince Charles foreland, which they left not more than an hour before the previous searchers arrived. The Hucks reached the foreland on Sept. 4, and the relief party, not finding the explorers there, waited several days. They then organized a search and finally came upon Bruce in a very much exhausted condition. He has now completely recovered.

New Yorker Slain and Mutilated.

New York, Sept. 23.—Epiphonio Arcara, proprietor of an East Side skirt factory, was murdered in his factory Sunday. His enemy, not satisfied with inflicting 15 stiletto wounds, any one of which might have caused death, mutilated the body in a horrible manner. The only police clue is two clearly defined prints of a thumb and forefinger on the jamb of the factory door.

Negro Brute Is Lynched.

Pritchett Station, Ala., Sept. 23.—Mose Dosssett, a negro, was lynched here Sunday for an attempted assault upon Mrs. J. Breeder, a white woman 90 years old. Dosssett was hanged to the same tree from which two negroes, Jim Robinson and Will Thompson, were lynched almost exactly one year ago.

S.S.S. DRIVES OUT

S.S.S. RHEUMATISM

The cause of Rheumatism is a sour, acid condition of the blood, brought about by indigestion, chronic constipation, and the accumulation in the system of refuse matter which the natural eliminative organs have failed to carry out. This refuse or waste matter ferments and sours, generating uric acid which is absorbed into the blood and distributed to all parts of the body, and Rheumatism gets possession of the system. One may also be born with a predisposition or tendency to Rheumatism, because like all blood diseases it can be transmitted from parent to child. The aches and pains of the disease are only symptoms which you may scatter or relieve with liniments, plasters, blisters, etc., or deaden with opiates. As soon, however, as such treatment is left off or there is any exposure to cold or dampness, or after an attack of indigestion or constipation, the wandering pains, sore muscles and joints, and tender places on the chest return, and the sufferer finds that he has merely checked the symptoms while the real cause of the disease remains in the blood. Rheumatism can never be cured while the blood remains saturated with irritating, pain-producing uric acid poison. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism by driving the cause out of the blood. It thoroughly cleanses the blood and renews the circulation by neutralizing the acids and expelling all foreign matter from the system. S. S. S. stimulates and invigorates the blood so that instead of a weak, sour stream, constantly depositing acid and corrosive matter in the muscles, joints, nerves and bones, the body is soothed and nourished by rich, health-sustaining blood, which completely and permanently cures Rheumatism. S. S. S. is composed of roots, herbs and barks which possess both purifying and tonic properties—just what is needed in every case of Rheumatism. Book on Rheumatism and medical advice free. An old soldier writes about ARIOSIA Coffee: "Your coffee is the best and richest coffee I ever drank since I left the service, from '61 until I received your coffee yesterday." A soldier knows coffee by the taste, and the way it makes him feel, and would sooner go without his bread than without his coffee. Arbuckle's ARIOSIA was the first roasted, packaged coffee, packaged for protection of consumers, roasted and the pores of each berry sealed with a coating of fresh eggs and pure sugar, to hold the goodness in and make the coffee settle clear and quickly. Better than a "fresh roast." Warming a little develops the flavor and makes the grinding easy. Our enormous coffee business, exceeding the next four largest firms in the world together, reduces our average cost per pound, and enables us to give you better coffee for your money than you can buy in any other way. There are more packages of ARIOSIA sold in the United States than all the other Coffee packages combined.

NOT SOLID ENOUGH FOOD. Nuts seem to fail to satisfy the Human Animal.

Next as the darlings of the world, the food reformer comes nuts of all sorts, says a writer in McClure's. These are urged upon us with special fervor and enthusiasm by those who regard all foods of animal origin as "tainted money," beset by the foul crime of murder. Here, we are told, are foodstuffs—walnuts, hickory nuts, Brazil nuts, pecans, peanuts—of a high degree of wholesomeness and attractiveness, not excessive in expense, and containing a larger percentage of both protein and fat. Analysis made in the laboratory absolutely confirm the truth of the statement: Fats and proteins are readily digestible food; and yet practically no "unmammalian" specimen of the human race—except the Shawnee Indian in hickory nut time—will attempt to make a meal on nuts, regarding them simply as a bonus, to be taken after the serious business of the meal is over, merely as a dessert. The tact phrase of "the walnuts and the wine" expresses precisely where they are in the scale of the normal diet list.

Her loud voice rang fiercely through the empty shop and echoed round and round. But there came no answering cry. Not a sound could be heard in the street. On the bare floor was the lamp shining on that dreadful sight—the body with sealed lips and the glittering jewel, and leaning against the wall were the two women, Deborah, staring at her dead master, but with Sylvia's eyes pressed against her bosom so that she might not witness the horror. And the stillness deepened weirdly every moment.

Sylvia tried to move her head, but Deborah pressed it closer to her breast. "Don't, my pretty—don't," she whispered harshly. "I must—ah—The girl freed her head from those kind arms with a wrench and looked at the greivous sight. She staggered forward a few steps and then fell back. Deborah received her in her arms and, thankful that Sylvia had fainted, carried her up the stairs to lay the unconscious girl on her own bed. Then she descended rapidly, locked the door leading from the shop to the stairs and again looked at the body. The time she had been away was about seven or eight minutes, and the body still remained with the one open eye staring unblinkingly at the ceiling. Deborah, drawn by fascination like a bird by a serpent, crept forward and touched the head. It moved, and she again tried to lift it. This time she found she could do so. The head she lifted against her breast and then laid it down again with horror when she found the bosom of her nightgown was stained with blood. Pulling her veil together, for she felt that she needed them every one, she examined the head and neck. To her horror she found round the throat a strong thin copper wire, which disappeared through a hole in the floor. Apparently this had been pulled so tightly as to keep the head down and to choke the old man, and so cruelly as to cut deeply into the flesh. With a moan of horror Deborah dropped the head and ran to the trapdoor in the corner. If anywhere, those who had murdered Aaron Norman were lurking in the cellar. But the trapdoor would not open, and then she remembered that it was closed by a bolt underneath. She could not reach the midnight assassin that way.

NATIONAL LEAD COMPANY

1310 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

"The front door," she gasped, and ran to unlatch it. The bolts were easily removed, but the door was also locked, and Aaron usually had the key deposited nightly in the cellar by Bart. Resolute as it was for her to approach the dead body, Deborah again went forward and felt in the pockets and loose clothing. The man was completely dressed, even to an overcoat which he wore. But she could not find the key and wondered what she was to do. Probably the key had been hung up in the cellar as usual. Necessity being the mother of invention, she remembered that the window glass was fragile and ran up in the hope of breaking through. But the stout shutters were up, so Deborah found that she was sealed in the house.

Almost in a state of distraction, for by this time her nerve had given way, she unlocked the door to the stairs and ran up, three steps at a time, to the sitting room. Here she opened the window and scrambled out on to the ledge among Sylvia's flower pots. Just as she was wondering how she could get down the measured tread of a policeman was heard, and by craning her neck Deborah saw him coming leisurely along the street, swinging his dark lantern on the windows and doors. It was a moonlight night and the street was extraordinarily well lighted, as the moon shone straightly between the houses. Gathering her strength for a last effort, Deborah yelled so only she could yell and saw the startled officer spinning round, looking up and down and sideways to see where the shrieks came from. "Up—up—oh, look up, you fool!" screamed Deborah. "Murder—oh, murder! Durt in the door! Call the police, durt you! Help! Help!"

By this time she was the center of a circle of bright light, for the policeman had located her and his lantern was flashing on her white nightgown as she clung to the window sill.

"What are you making that noise for?" called up the officer gruffly. "Murder, you fool!" screamed Deborah. "Master's murdered. No. 45—the door's locked—break it open! Police! Police!"

Before she finished the sentence the officer blew his whistle shrilly and ran to the door of the shop, against which he placed his shoulder. Deborah climbed in again by the window and ran down again, but even then, in her excitement and horror, she did not forget to lock the door leading to the stairs, so that Sylvia might not be disturbed. As she descended she flung a thick shawl over her shoulders, which she had caught up when leaving her room, though for the rest she had nothing on but a nightgown. But the poor woman was too terrified to be troubled by any scruples at the moment and reached the shop to hear heavy blows on the door. Between the thuds Deborah could hear footsteps running toward her from every quarter. "I ain't got the key!" she shrieked through the keyhole. "Herek in the door, durt you! Murder! Murder!"

From the noise she made those without concluded that some terrible crime was taking place within and redoubled their efforts. Deborah had just time to leap back after a final scream when the door fell flat on the floor, and three policemen sprang into the room with drawn batons and their lights flashing like stars. The lamp was still on the floor shedding its heavy yellow light on the corpse. "Master!" gasped Deborah, pointing a shivering finger. "Dead—the cellar—the—here she made as to drop. A policeman caught her in his arms, but the woman shook herself free. "I ain't faint—no—I ain't faint," she gasped, "the cellar—look—look!" She ran forward and raised the head of the dead man. When the officers saw the dangling shawl wire disappearing through a hole in the floor they grasped the situation. "The passage outside!" cried Deborah, directing operations; "the trapdoor," she ran to it, "fast bolted below, and then murdering people are there."

"How many are there?" asked a policeman, while several others ran round the back through the side passage.

"Oh, you dented fool, how should I know?" cried Deborah fiercely; "there may be one and there may be twenty. Go and catch them—you're paid for it. Send to 20 Park street, Bloomsbury, for Bart."

Deborah ran up the stairs to Sylvia's room, where she found the poor girl still unconscious.

Meanwhile, an inspector had arrived, and one of the policemen was detailing all that had occurred from the time Deborah had given the alarm at the window. The inspector listened quietly to everything and then examined the body. "Strangled with a copper wire," he said, looking up. "Go for a doctor, one of you. It goes through the floor," he added, touching the wire which still encircled the throat, "and must have been pulled from below. Examine the cellar."

Even as he spoke, and while one zealous officer ran off for a medical man, there was a grating sound and the trapdoor was thrown open. A policeman leaped into the shop and saluted when he saw his superior. By this time the gas had been lighted. "We've broken down the back door, sir," said he, "the cellar door—it was locked but not bolted. Nothing in the cellar, everything in order, but that wire," he pointed to the means used for strangling, "chugged from the cell-ing and a crosspiece of wood is bolted to the lower end."

"Who does the shop belong to?" "Aaron Norman," said the policeman whose boat it was. "He's a second-hand bookseller, a quiet, harmless, timid sort of man."

"Any one about?" "No, sir. I passed down Gwynne street at about a quarter past 12 and all seemed safe. When I came back later—it might have been twenty minutes and more, say twenty-five—I saw the woman who was down here clinging to a window on the first floor and shouting murder. I gave the summons, sir, and we broke open the door."

Inspector Prince questioned not only the Gwynne street policeman, who had given his report, but all others who had been in the vicinity. But they could tell him nothing. No one suspicious had been seen leaving Gwynne street north or south, so, finding he could learn nothing in this direction, Prince turned his attention to the servant. "Now, then, what do you know?" he asked. "Don't say anything likely to incriminate yourself."

"Me?" shouted Deborah, bounding up with a fiery face. "Don't you be taking away my character. Why, I know no more who have done it than a babe unborn, and that's stupid enough. I know, Mr. Policeman. Ho, indeed! And we pays our taxes to be insulted by you, Mr. Policeman!" She was very aggravating, and many a man would have lost his temper. But Inspector Prince was a quiet and self-controlled officer and knew how to deal with this violent class of women. He simply waited till Deborah had exhausted herself and then gently asked her a few questions. Finding he was reasonable, Deborah became reasonable on her part and replied with great intelligence. In a few minutes the inspector, by handling her deftly, learned all that had taken place on that terrible night from the time Sylvia had started up in bed at the sound of that distant cry of a soul in agony. "And that, from what Miss Sylvia says," ended Deborah, "was just before the church clock struck the hour of 12."

"You came down a quarter of an hour later?" "I did when Miss Sylvia woke me," said Deborah. "She was frightened out of her seven senses and couldn't get up at once. Yes, it was about twenty minutes after the hour we came down to see—it." And the woman, strong nerved as she was, shuddered. "A tumb!" said the inspector. "The assassin had time to escape?"

"Begging your pardon, sir, then or him or her or it as murdered master was below in the cellar when we saw the corp—not that it was what you'd call a corp then."

"Will you say precisely what you mean?" Deborah did so and with such wealth of detail that even the hardened inspector felt the creep down his official back. There was something terribly merciless about this crime. The man had been bound like a sheep for the slaughter, his mouth had been sealed with the brooch so that he could not cry out, and then, in the sight of his child and servant, he had been slowly strangled by means of the copper wire which communicated with the cellar. One of the policemen brought up an anger which evidently had been used to bore the hole for the wire to pass through, for the fresh suspicion was still in its whole. "Who does this belong to?" Prince asked Deborah.

"It's Bart's," said Deborah, staring. "He was using it along with other tools, to make some doll boxes for murder, who was going away. I expect it was found in the cellar in the tool box, for Bart always brought it in (kissed) after he'd done his work in the yard, weather or being time, of course," ended Deborah, smiling.

"Where is this Bart?" "In bed, like a decent man, if he's to be my husband, which he is," said Miss Junk furiously. "I told one of them little bobbies to go and fetch him from Bloomsbury."

"One has gone," said another policeman. "Bart Tawney, isn't he?"

"Mr. Bartholomew Tawney, if you please," said the servant grandly. "I only hope he'll be here soon to protect me."

"You're quite safe," said Prince dryly, "provided there was a smile on the faces of his underlings, for Deborah in her disordered dress and with her swollen, flushed, excited face was not comely. "What about this brooch you say is the cause of it all?" Deborah dropped, with an air of fatigue, "If you kill me I can't talk of it now," she protested. "The brooch belonged to Mr. Paul Beecot."

"And where is he?" "In the Charing Cross hospital, if you want to know, and as he's engaged to my pretty you needn't think he does it—so there."

"I am accusing no one," said the inspector grimly, "but we must get to the bottom of this horrible crime."

CAMPS OF MOORS BURNED

DRUDE RESUMES HOSTILITIES, NEGOTIATIONS FAILING.

French Troops Make Brilliant Forced March, Disperse the Tribesmen and Return to Casablanca.

Casablanca, Sept. 23.—Negotiations for the cessation of hostilities having failed, Gen. Drude Sunday resumed the offensive and burned the Moorish camps at Elidi Braham, south of Casablanca, and dispersed the tribesmen, who offered but little resistance.

These operations were chiefly notable for a brilliant forced march of the French troops, who covered 40 kilometers inside of 12 hours. The expedition, consisting of 2,000 infantry, with a detachment of cavalry, artillery and native auxiliaries, left camp before dawn and formed into two hollow squares, one behind the other. In this formation they marched some distance under the cover of darkness and unobserved by the tribesmen.

A heavy morning sea fog came up at daybreak and forced a half-hour's halt, during which shots fired by the advance guards gave the alarm to the enemy. The tribesmen came up in large numbers, but a vigorous attack by the first square soon dispersed them. No farther stand was made by the enemy during the march, although scattered groups of horsemen harassed the French flanks.

After the destruction of the camps had been effected the tribesmen returned to the attack, a troop of cavalry repelling a spirited charge by the Moorish horsemen. The French then abandoned their defensive formation and the column returned to camp. Their losses were one killed and ten wounded.

Washington, Sept. 23.—Thirty-two passengers were injured, none of them seriously, by the derailment of the Chattanooga & Washington Limited train on the Southern railway, just north of Ryan's Sliding, early Sunday. A broken rail was the cause of the accident. The entire train, composed of a baggage car, day coach and three sleepers, left the track, the sleepers being almost destroyed by fire. A special train was quickly made up and came to this city with all the passengers of the limited.

STEAMER LAUNCHED; SINKS.

New Vessel at Genoa Turns Over as She Strikes Water.

Genoa, Sept. 23.—The trans-Atlantic liner Princess Yolande was launched Sunday, but turned over and sank as soon as she reached the water. The captain and his guests and the workmen aboard the vessel had barely time enough to take to the small boats. The Princess Yolande is of 10,000 tons and 450 feet long. She is valued at $200,000. Divers are endeavoring to ascertain the extent of her damage.

Goebel Story Is Not Believed.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 23.—The statement sent out from Richmond, Ind., purporting to give the substance of an affidavit of Mrs. Lulu Clark that she was on the steps of the state house the day Gov. Goebel was shot, and heard Turner say he shot him, is regarded here as being a fabrication as it is at variance with all witnesses who have testified in the case.

Life Sentence for Constantine.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Frank J. Constantine was found guilty of the murder of Mrs. Louise Gentry by a jury in Judge Marcus Kavanaugh's court at 11:45 o'clock Saturday night. His punishment was fixed at imprisonment in the penitentiary for life. The famous case made a record for speed in Chicago, it having occupied in all exactly six days.

More Strike-Breaking Doers.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 23.—It was announced from railroad headquarters that 100 more men arrived from the east Sunday to break the holler-makers' strike. Fifty will go to work Monday morning at the St. Paul shops of the Omaha road and 50 will be sent to Livingston, Mont., to work in the Northern Pacific shops.

Jail Delivery in Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Two prisoners in the county jail here overpowered a guard Sunday, locked him in a cell, saved through the bars of a window and escaped.

ALEXANDER NIMMICK LOST ON A LAKE SUPERIOR REEF.

DISABLED DURING STORM

Captain, Mate and Several Sailors Drown—Survivors Land on a Bleak and Uninhabited Coast.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 23.—The $50,000 lake steamer Alexander Nimmick, of Cleveland, O., was wrecked Saturday night on the bleak southern shore of Lake Superior, 13 miles west of White Fish point. No living soul was within many miles of the desolate place where the survivors laboriously managed to pilot their lifeboats through the raging surf; no help was at hand to minister to the exhausted and frozen sailors or to care for the bodies of the six or seven victims, washed up on the rocks by the waves.

Dignity of Sorrow.

Strong and pure natures know how to thrust their emotions deep down in their hearts, feeling a sort of immediacy in unweaving their troubles, when no human word can express their depth, and fearing the mockery of people who do not wish to understand them.—Balzac.

To Forget.

To forget is the great secret of strong and creative natures—to forget after the manner of Nature herself, who knows no past, who begins afresh at every hour the mysteries of her uncurtained travail.—Balzac.

MAJESTIC WALKING CAKE

Will Be Exhibited Wednesday, Sept. 25

At 3 o'clock p. m., at the Sheldon Hardware Co.'s Store

A cake 20 inches square and 6 inches high will be baked. After being baked the cake will be placed beneath a board upon which twenty ladies are invited to stand. Like "truth crushed to earth, it will rise again," and it will then be served to the ladies present.

Facts About

The Great Majestic Range

It is the only range in the world made of Malleable and Charcoal Iron.

It has, beyond any question of a doubt, the largest and best reservoir.

It uses about half the fuel used on other ranges, and does better work by far.

The Majestic All Copper Nickle Reservoir heats the water quicker and hotter than any other. It is the only reservoir with a removable frame.

The Charcoal Iron Body of the Great Majestic Range lasts three times as long as a steel body.

Being made of non-breakable material, there is practically no expense for repairing the Majestic.

As for baking, it is perfect, not only for a few months, but for all time to come.

A Great Majestic Range lasts three times as long as a cheap range, but it doesn't cost three times as much.

PROOF—We don't ask you to take our word for any of the above statements, but if you will call at our store, a man from the factory, where Majestic ranges are made, will prove to your satisfaction, that these are absolute facts, and will show you many more reasons why the Great Majestic Range is absolutely the best that money can buy.

THE SLEEVE STYLES

BEWILDERING VARIETY OF THE SEASON'S FANCIES.

General Adoption of the Gump Dress is Largely Responsible—Point to Remember in Ordinary Fall Costumes.

Fashion seems to have gone mad in the many developments of fancy sleeves that are seen on the up-to-date frock. Never were there so many bewildering varieties; the general adoption of the gump dress is largely responsible for this.

Today, almost without exception, dresses and separate blouses are made with the gump and the more elaborate the sleeve the smarter the gown. Indeed, shops are showing dresses made up on long straight lines, almost void of trimming, yet with sleeves so intricate and elaborate that no one but an artist could develop them.

Now we are told that with cold weather the long sleeve will invade the shops. However, for certain frocks the short sleeve will always be worn.

The fullness of the up-to-date sleeve has been transferred from the shoulder to the elbow, and now sleeves seem to droop from the shoulder, being exceedingly full at the cuff.

For outer garments almost all sleeves are three-quarter length, save in the extreme tailor-made gowns calling for the full-length sleeve.

The frock proper has a suggestion of an oversleeve, many of them being slashed up the outside to show the

The Slashed Sleeve. beauties of the undersleeve which is attached to the gump. Another pretty idea is to turn back the corners of this outer sleeve and hold them in place with the corners of ribbon or handsome buttons.

Then again, these points are braided or embroidered. Perhaps the most popular form of undersleeve is that made of row upon row of lace ruffles. As for trimmings, buttons, tiny bows of ribbon, embroidery and braiding are at present at the top of popularity's wave.

The blouse with the chemise effect is exceedingly smart made of dark silk, trimmed with silk buttons and edged with a piping.

A fancy blouse with deep lace yoke gives opportunity for the very newest style of trimming, and can be developed in heavier goods, such as light-weight cloth or heavy silk. This model is particularly becoming to a stout figure.

The over blouse, or modified form of jumper, is most attractive made up in softer silks such as lawn, mesaline, etc., trimmed with tiny bows, a few velvet buttons and the lace gump. Make your sleeves in every instance just as elaborate as you please, the more so the better.

Cashmere, as a material for house gowns, is again greatly in demand, and for such purposes nothing is more attractive than the shirred princess model.

Put all your work on the sleeve, insert them with medallion, join them together with fancy stitches, introduce cordings, shirtings, what you will and as much as you will, and your sleeve will give your whole dress a distinct style.

In making your fall clothes do not neglect the sleeves, for it is the feature par excellence of the smart frock—it tells plainer than anything else that your dress is of this season's make, and the woman never lived that didn't want to be well dressed.

Finding a Satisfactory Hat.

The woman who wears an unbecoming hat has only herself to blame, for so much latitude is there in these days that the prettiest of women often have trouble in finding a satisfactory hat. There are, however, several rules to be followed. Devote plenty of time to the selection of a shape, sit while having it tried on to your head and then survey it from every possible angle. A dip-brim will make a long nose look longer, a round hat lends width to a round face and brilliant trimming adds years to a faded complexion.

Life.

Think of living! Thy life, wert thou the pitifullest of all the sons of earth, is no idle dream, but a solemn reality. It is thy own. It is all thou hast to front eternally with. Work, then, even as He has done, and do, like a star, unobscured yet unobscured. —Thomas Carlyle.

To Mend Granite Wear.

Place together equal parts of sulphur and black lead and melt a portion of this in the hole with a hot iron as in soldering.

ART IN THE HOME

BEAUTIFUL THINGS SHOWN IN PROFUSION.

At No Time Has the Housewife Had the Opportunity to Make Her Dwelling so Perfect in Appearances.

Floral muslin for window and bed draperies are shown in a great assortment and at very reasonable cost. Bed sets including a coverlet and cover for the bolster-roll are retailed for $2.50. Some have all-over patterns, others borders.

Ruffled curtains of figured Swiss have hemstitched ruffles of plain Swiss. Floral patterns are also shown in window draperies. Where the curtains and bed-draperies match or harmonize with the wall paper, a very good effect is obtained.

Marking the linen with embroidered monograms in the color of the room in which it is to be used is a new departure, which entails several separate sets of linen, as but few housekeepers have more than one bedroom in the same color scheme.

The so-called "nasty" secretaries are greatly in demand and very hard to find. They are those quaint, old-fashioned mahogany writing desks, with drawers, or doors in under part, a flap that lets down on braces, and top with glass doors showing shelves for books. In the top part china can equally well be kept, or any other precious belonging that is safest under lock and key.

Centerpieces and dollies that are embroidered in colors or made of drawn work should never be allowed to get very soiled before washing, not only because everything that belongs to a table should be kept spotlessly clean, but because they are perishable things and should never be rubbed hard.

Many attractive novelties are shown in art embroidery. Foremost among them are the cottage sets for summer homes and cottages. These sets are selling better than ever before. Hitherto, confined almost wholly to the great metropolitan centers, the demand for them now has spread over the entire country and promises to have a great boom.

Stem ware, as the charmingly shaped goblets and other splendid glasses are called, is to be rimmed with gilt and ornamented with a gilt monogram or crest. For country houses there is a veritable craze for glass in every shape and form in which it will prove serviceable for the table, and the cases of the housekeeper are thus greatly lightened, as many pieces do away with similar articles of silver which means much care.

Few Branches Not Missed. Even a family tree may occasionally need a little pruning.

NEW IDEA IN SHIRT WAISTS.

Complete Garment Easily Made from Two Handkerchiefs.

Since the first inventive genius turned in the four corners of a handkerchief and made a dainty decoration almost every article produced by a finger agile at needlework has at one time or another joined the list of handkerchief-made articles.

The latest recruit is a complete shirt waist, and the directions are very simple: Cut the two handkerchiefs in four triangles by laying two opposite corners together. Join these four pieces together with Valenciennes lace insertion, making a large square. Now make a short yoke of the insertion, using about five or six rows, and join the handkerchief to it. Use two stripes of insertion on the side of the handkerchief and join the material you are using. Cut out to fit. Make back and sleeves like those of any other waists. Finish neck and sleeves with insertion and edge.

FOR SCHOOL WEAR.

Little red felt hat for school wear; it is simply trimmed in a plaid drape, with long streamers.

Tea Gowns Are Closer Fitting. A negligee in which one may enjoy perfect relaxation and at the same time uphold the accepted canons of artistic appearance, is of shaded pink asphodel silk, the upper part of the garment is of pink shading to a deep rose at the hem. The usual loose effect of a tea gown is entirely done away with, the soft folds are drawn into a fitted bolero of openwork embroidery which opens over a chemise of Dalghall crepe. Long dolman sleeves of silk are edged with soft frills of crepe.—Dress.

A Redfern Gown.

Redfern is responsible for a handsome evening frock in Wedgewood blue tussore silk. The material, though of exquisite quality, is very light in weight, almost sheer. The outline of the tulle describes a redingote effect, but the redingote is cut in one piece with the brette portion of the bodice. The silk is braided in the narrowest of Wedgewood blue soulache braid.

SPORTING REVIEW.

Great Athletic Career of Baron Desborough—American Yachting Defeat.

Baron Desborough, who is at the head of the Olympic games to be held in London next year, is better known as W. H. Grenfell, which was his name two years ago when he was made a baron by King Edward.

It was under this name he swam twice across Niagara river. He is one of the world's famous athletes. He has rowed across the English channel, ascended the Matterhorn three times, been a champion oarsman and a fencer of renown as well.

For the Olympic games he has arranged for a stadium which will hold 70,000 spectators. There will be 2,000 contestants in the games, representing twenty-five nations.

The Spanish wonderclass yacht Dorica recently won the fourth race of the international series between the American and Spanish boats at San Sebastian, Spain, and was awarded the king's gold cup. She had won two previous races.

The yachts sailed over a triangular course of nine miles. The wind was light and variable. At the start the Marblehead, one of the American boats, came into collision with the Dios Salvo in Helms while tacking.

The Dorica led throughout and won easily. The Princess de las Asturias was second, the Marblehead third, the Dios Salvo in Helms fourth, the American Spokane fifth and the American Cheviak VIII, sixth.

Light winds, the opposite of those at Kiel, prevailed during the entire series of races. The Dorica was especially built for such conditions.

Irving Wright and Raymond D. Little, the well known lawn tennis players, have made a contract that is unique in the history of any sport in which amateurs are paired. They have agreed to play as partners for twenty years—that is, in all tournaments which call for doubles the one will not take part without the other. What the penalty is for either man breaking the contract is not stipulated.

Wright and Little have played together successfully for some time, and the other tennis experts look upon their action as an attempt to corner the trophy market and insure their remaining top notches as long as they stay in the game.

Shortstop Crowder of Evansville, Ind., was knocked partly unconscious in a game with Terre Haute and had no recollection of making a home run until later. Most men who make home runs when in a dazed condition are brought to their senses promptly.

John W. Gates is looking for a racing stable in England. If he knows as much about racing stables as about the proper time to desert Wall street they may as well begin to shove the plate his way.

Many different theories are advanced as regards the best way to recover or get into a canoe after an upset. In the accompanying cut is shown one mode that has been tested successfully by many experts.

Judge Landis asks that any man who proposes him for governor be hit on the head with a baseball bat. The national game certainly has its hold when they begin to introduce its implements into politics.

GRADES OF RANK IN JAPAN.

Society There is Divided into Many Separate Classes.

A traveler just returned from Japan tells some things which perhaps all the world does not know. Says he: "Of rank, there are eight classes after the mikado; the nobles, namely (1) the princes; (2) the nobles who owe feudal service to the prince, or the emperor; (3) the priests; (4) the soldiers. These four form the higher orders and enjoy the privilege of wearing two swords and petticoat trousers; (5) inferior officials and doctors, called respectable, allowed to wear one sword, with the trousers; (6) merchants and tradesmen, whose legs may not pollute the trousers, though by entering as domestics to a man of rank they may enjoy the privilege of wearing one sword; these are the only people by whom wealth can be accumulated; (7) artists, artisans and petty shopkeepers; (8) day laborers and peasants. Tradesmen who work on leather, tanners, etc., are excluded from classification. They are defiled, and may not even live with other men; they live in villages of their own.

FIGHT WITH SAVAGE LION. Adventurous Hunter Paid for Sport With His Life.

From the Sudan comes the report of a fierce fight between a wounded lion and a government engineer, which ended in the death of the latter, an Englishman named C. H. Salmon. Salmon, while on board the steamer Motemah, between Fashoda and Melut, on the White Nile, discovered a lion among the bushes on the shore. Taking a gun, he went ashore asking those on board not to follow him. He shot twice at the lion, one bullet taking effect in the lion's shoulder and the other in the abdomen. After a struggle of a few minutes, which seemed to be his death agony, the lion lay motionless. Salmon approached and the lion pounced upon him, and threw him to the ground and began to maul him. The engineer held the lion's neck and endeavored to draw his knife, but before he succeeded the lion had bitten his thigh and crushed his toes. He gave the beast a stab in the eyes. This infuriated the animal, which snapped at the man's hand, badly lacerating and smashing it. The pain of the knife thrust, however, was too much for the animal and he started to retreat. The crew of the steamer now arrived upon the scene. They killed the exhausted lion without much difficulty and carried the unfortunate hunter to the boat, which then sailed with all possible speed to Fashoda, where he was taken to the hospital and received medical attention, only to expire of his injuries when removed to Khartoum.
